Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Sunday 30 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
A fine and dry day for all, feeling warm.

Today:
A dry day with plenty of blue skies, sunshine, and light winds. Some fair-weather cloud will develop across Cumbria into the afternoon. A warm day, with a sea breeze making coastal areas feel cooler. Maximum temperature 23 deg C (73 deg F).

Tonight:
Staying dry through the evening and overnight. Lengthy clear spells will persist for many, but easternmost areas will see some low cloud and hill fog through the early hours. Minimum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Monday:
Any early cloud and hill fog will soon clear, leaving another fine and dry day with plenty of sunshine. Some fair-weather clouds bubbling up in the afternoon. Feeling warm again. Maximum temperature 24 deg C (75 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Very warm and sunny on Tuesday, with light winds. More sunny spells but slightly cooler on Wednesday, with risks of showers lasting into Thursday, heaviest overnight. Turning fresher later.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.